for 13 GenerationsAmasake-chaya Tea HouseExplanation of Tourist Attraction

Founded in the early Edo period, this long-standing Hakone tea house has continued to protect the unchanging taste of amasake. Famous for its handmade amasake which doesn't use any sugar or additives, and for its soft rice cakes baked with Binchotan charcoal, many fans still visit this tea house. You can get a full taste of the Edo period, with the thatched roof appearance and a hearth inside the tea house.

selling point

The additive-free amazake, made with only locally produced non-glutinous rice and rice yeast, is made with a production method which hasn't changed since Edo. There are also seasonal menu items, such as kakigori (shaved ice) with handmade syrup in the summer.
